

Contributions in 2009-2010

The generosity of contributors like the ones listed below and in-kind donors is invaluable to fulfilling the mission of Cornell Cooperative Extension in Fulton and Montgomery Counties. While fundraising efforts are one way to continue our work, monetary donations are the means by which we grow. These gifts allow CCEFM to support ongoing educational outreach, form partnerships, market our programs, and increase our ability to improve the human condition in Fulton and Montgomery Counties. We thank our donors for recognizing the value of these programs and supporting our mission through generous monetary gifts.

Support for Cornell Cooperative Extension takes many forms throughout the year—an encouraging word, an expression of appreciation for a valuable learning experience, an extra pair of hands for any number of tasks, a donation of goods or services to help with a project. While it is nearly impossible to place a dollar value on such kindnesses, such support is just as valuable to our mission. We thank individuals, businesses and organizations who have provided in-kind support during the 2009-2010 program year of Cornell Cooperative Extension in Fulton and Montgomery Counties.
